Gromyko Says U. S. Aiding Franco Spain

By MAX HARRELSON

Lake Success, May 6 — (AP) — Russia's Andrei A. Gromyko charged today the United States and Britain are strengthening Franco Spain by supplying arms and giving it economic and political assistance.

The Soviet deputy foreign minister spoke before the 58-nation political committee of the United Nations assembly.

He accused the two big western powers of thwarting U. N. attempts to bring about the downfall of Generalissimo Francisco Franco. "They have done everything possible," Gromyko said, "to prevent the implementation of assembly resolutions."

Gromyko addressed the committee as it neared a showdown vote on the question of the top-level diplomatic boycott on the Franco regime.

Famed Belgian Writer Dies at Age of 86

Paris, May 6 — (AP) — Count Maurice Maeterlinck, famed Belgian author of "The Blue Bird" and other works, died in Nice today, the French press agency reported. He was 86.

Maeterlinck's works are noted for their fanciful beauty. Among the most famous are "Pelleas et Melisande," made into an opera by the French composer Claude Debussy; "The Blue Bird"; "The Life of the Ant"; and "The Life of the Bee."

Maeterlinck was awarded the Nobel prize for literature in 1911. Most of his later years were spent on the French Riviera, but when the Germans moved on Paris in 1940 Maeterlinck fled to the United States with his wife, arriving in New York Dec. 7, 1940.

Maeterlinck's greatest popularity came in 1914, he made one of his rare public appearances, attending the first English language presentation of the opera, "Pelleas et Melisande," by the Philadelphia Opera Company.

"The Blue Bird" brought Maeterlinck his greatest popularity in the United States. It was widely popular in the form of a motion picture starring Shirley Temple.

DOROTHY DIX Mixed Marriages

Dear Dorothy Dix: I believe most firmly in practicing the spirit of democracy so far as friendships are concerned, but with marriage it is different, and I think it is most important that husbands and wives should have a similar background. For these reasons:

(1) There are likely to be differences of opinion in marriage as to what constitutes good taste, good manners and good judgment. (2) The matter of laws, who are likely to be critical of, or not to understand people of a different race. (3) The person from a less privileged background is likely to feel inferior. (4) There are sure to be differences of opinion on the rearing of children. (5) The person from a more privileged background is likely to have a superiority complex.

These are the things that make Cinderella marriages so hazardous.

JAMES P. Answer: Right, you are, James. In contending that people should marry in their own class, but you have omitted the most dangerous of all that threatens a marriage, and that is religion. For it is strange, but true, that the thing which should draw husbands and wives closest together and make them one unit, and understanding of each other is the thing which the bitterest domestic fights are fought, and that breaks up more families than anything else covers are optimists. They think that nothing matters except that they thrill at each other's touch, and they never doubt but that they will go on billing and cooing forever. But the cold, hard fact is that when they settle down to everyday life, the thing that is vital important is the thing that have the same tastes and habits.

Basic Truth
Irvin Cobb once said that the Civil War wasn't fought over slavery. It was fought over the issue of hot bread versus cold bread. And silly as that sounds it is a basic truth. The successful marriage are those in which husbands and wives worship the same God, the same ticket, laugh over the same jokes, like the same cooking, and are proud of each other.

No couple should marry until they have okayed their fiancés' grandparents.

Dear Dorothy Dix: At what age

do you think a boy and girl should go steady?

Answer: Not until they have out their wisdom teeth on a lot of kids whom they thought they could not live without, but whom they found out, when it was too late to do them any good, that they couldn't live with.

I think it is a fine thing for boys and girls to grow up together, to play around together, but it should be on a mass, so to speak. They should stop out with Tom, Dick and Harry, but not tie themselves down to one girl or boy. That is ruinous for the joy of youth, because it makes them a habit to each other instead of a thrill. Also, it narrows down their choice of a mate when it comes to the marrying time of life, because Sally and Tom have been steady so long they feel bound to marry each other's taste for each other.

George Washington's famous motto: "Friendship with all, antagonistic alliances with none" is still good. Especially for teen-agers.

Dear Miss Dix: My mother-in-law is very good to me, but everytime she comes down to stay with the children she always changes my furniture around and puts my things away were I can never find them. Also, she tries to run my house.

Please tell me what to do. I have held back my temper as long as I can.

Answer: Have you ever considered that you irritate other people just as much as they rub your fur the wrong way? All of us are hard to live with, and if we were wise we would cultivate a taste for each other instead of allowing things to get on our nerves.

Our only consolation is that we get even with others by being just as disagreeable about things as they are. Your mother-in-law, for instance, runs you crazy by shifting all of your furniture around when you are here age you will be telling your daughter-in-law how she should run her house.

So take a grip on your temper and hold it. Old people don't have much fun. (Released by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

ISLAND OF ESCAPE

By Hugh Lawrence Nelson

The Story: Four lonely women, selected through a matrimonial club, are candidates for bride of Henry Gough Harding, wealthy middle-aged, eccentric millionaire. On arrival, Bea Cosgrove, one of the women, finds the place far from being a paradise. She is troubled with some fishermen who roam the island for water, which Harding uses in his bottled amounts. Finally, she discovers four fresh graves, which Harding says are those of the men who died on the island. When Mabel comes to the island, she finds the same water supply cut off. She is told to give up the water, which Harding says: "The water is mine to give as I see fit."

Toward the end of the week when Bea was finishing up her afternoon cleaning of the main room, she noticed the door of the tower room ajar for the first time. She did not hesitate. She opened the door open and started inside.

Henry Harding sat at a small desk writing in a large, leather-bound notebook. Bea had time to notice the neat white coat, the ease of the man, the single hard chair, before the man whirled to face her. "Springs?" he demanded.

"You left the door open," Bea said flatly.

Harding got her outside of the simple process of walking toward her until she led to retreat. He managed a smile. "You startled me. For the time being I must see you — and the others — to consider this tower room as exclusively my own."

"Certainly. But wouldn't it be simpler if you told us where we can and cannot go?" Harding said. "In the future I'll be more careful of locks."

The week ended with Bea Cosgrove unable to find a safer hiding place for her automatic. She knew from the rate of sugar consumption it would be weeks before the spot was accessible.

Mrs. Warren started her week of cooking with an elaborate well-cooked breakfast. Afterward Bea went out on the veranda where Harding was tapping the barometer gently with a lead pencil.

"Storm on the way," he said. "Perhaps the rains. It is time. The water is lower than I like. Let's see. You haven't been around the island much, have you?"

"I've barely been out of the house."

"Before we start getting ready for the wind, we'll walk down to the fishermen's camp. That's a bad shore in a blow."

They followed the trail the fishermen had taken, west and north. Scarcely out of sight of the house, Harding stopped, turned aside to the four graves with their neat crosses.

He walked directly to the flowering plant on the grave bearing the name A. Robie, and stuck his finger in the dirt at its roots.

Bea knew the plant, she had seen it receiving such loving care from the master of the Simpatico. She had lived in California long enough to know globe as the Spanish for oak. Harding stood by and she could see moist dirt clinging to his finger.

"Watered again," he said. "Tell me. Did you bring water to this plant?"

"I didn't even know where it was. You know I haven't been away from the house long enough to explore."

He started down the trail again. Bea felt some of the freshness had left the morning breeze.

The well-defined path led across the flat rolling back of one hill, cut sharply downward past a curiously colored cliff with alternate patches of dark and vivid rock, toward the hidden beach. Bea could see the pipeline now. Its inch diameter left the shelter of its shallow ditch, swung downward toward the beach and the shallow, saucer-shaped, eroded basin of stone.

There was a ramshackle lean-to of driftwood with tatters of canvas flapping in the strengthening wind. There was a smell of fish and more penetrating odor of human habitation.

Bea turned away from the water when she heard Harding swear viciously. She joined him at the natural basin which held the daily allotment of water for the fishermen.

"The devils!" Harding sputtered. "They were supposed to let me know when they left. They've let me waste days of water."

The strong fish odor was explained, as she reached his side. Four dark brown fish about 15 inches long lay side by side, half-in and half-out of the water. They were pegged through the luminae on the tip of their heads to the scant sand. Pegged with wooden stakes and a crossbar lashed with fishline into the form of a crude cross.

Harding kicked the crosses into the pool. "The devils!" he repeated.

Wine Temperatures

According to connoisseurs, the rules for serving red and white wines at banquets is that red wines always should be served at room temperature while white wines, especially champagnes, should be chilled.

First Communist: "Nice weather we're having."

Second Dillo: "Yes, but the rich are having it, too."

Dodger Fa nto Withdraw Charges

New York, May 6 — (AP) — The attorney for Fred Boyesen, a Brooklyn baseball fan, said today he planned to seek court permission Monday to withdraw a simple assault summons against Leo Durocher, manager of the New York Giants.

"Our witnesses refuse to come forward," said the attorney, Benjamin H. Chasin, in explaining the latest turn of events in the Durocher episode. "I can't get in touch with them. They're changing their stories."

The summons was obtained in upper Manhattan court last Monday on a charge that Durocher assaulted Boyesen after a game between the Giants and Dodgers at the Polo Grounds on April 28.

The Giant pilot was suspended temporarily by Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler but reinstated after a hearing before the commissioner in Cincinnati last Tuesday.

Chasin said "public opinion" had made the witnesses he had lined up change their minds.

Rocks Shoved to Second Division

By the associated press —

The Birmingham Barons whipped
the Little Rock Travelers last night 5-3, to move up to the top spot in the Southern Association.

The Atlanta Crackers visited Memphis and knocked over the Chicks, 8-2; the Nashville Vols won 9-4 from the Mobile Bears and the Chattanooga Lookouts edged the New Orleans Pelicans, 6-5.

The Barons' move into first place in the standings was the fourth change in the top spot this week.

At the beginning of the week, the Travs were on top — and had been ever since the third day of play.

Then the Crackers grabbed the lead, holding it for only one day, when they were superceded by the Pelicans. Now the Barons have it.

Three homers by the Barons about two weeks, then began to slump. Birmingham's win over them last night was the Travs' eight consecutive loss
